

Three Pages to Color

These are three real pages from the Mariana Trench Ocean Coloring Book, printed here exactly as they appear in the book. Nothing has been redrawn for this file. Print them, hand them over, and if you get the chance, sit down and color one yourself alongside your kid.

What is on each page

2

The sea turtle

Charlotte and Henry free a turtle caught in a net. This is the page just after it swims off. Big shapes, easy for a younger colorer.

3

Stop. Breathe. Think. Act.

Four words from the coloring book's quote pages, set big enough to color in. This is the same set of words on the free poster, if you want the pair.

4

The anglerfish

The lantern fish of the deep, the one with its own light. More detail than the other two, so a good one for an older kid.

PRINTING THEM

US Letter, one page each, single sided. Plain copy paper is fine. If your printer offers it, choose Actual size rather than Fit to page so the lines stay crisp.

Crayons, colored pencils and markers all work. On these pages there are no wrong answers.

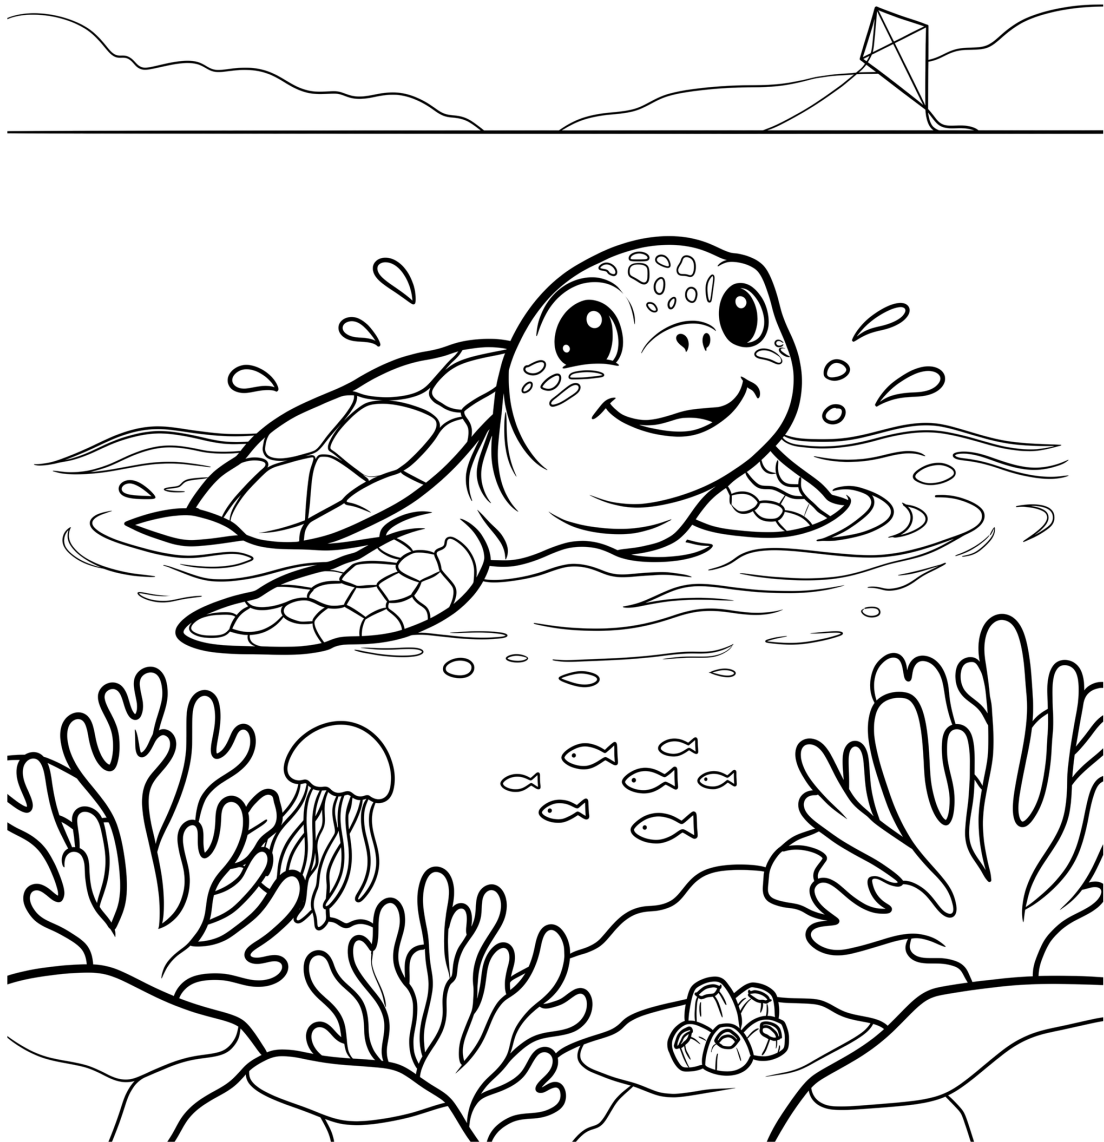

COLORING IT TOGETHER

Print two copies of the same page and color it at the same table. You do yours, they do theirs. It is a quiet thing to do side by side, and it does not need either of you to be good at drawing.

Page 3 is a good one to talk over. Ask them when a person might need those four words.

WHERE THESE CAME FROM

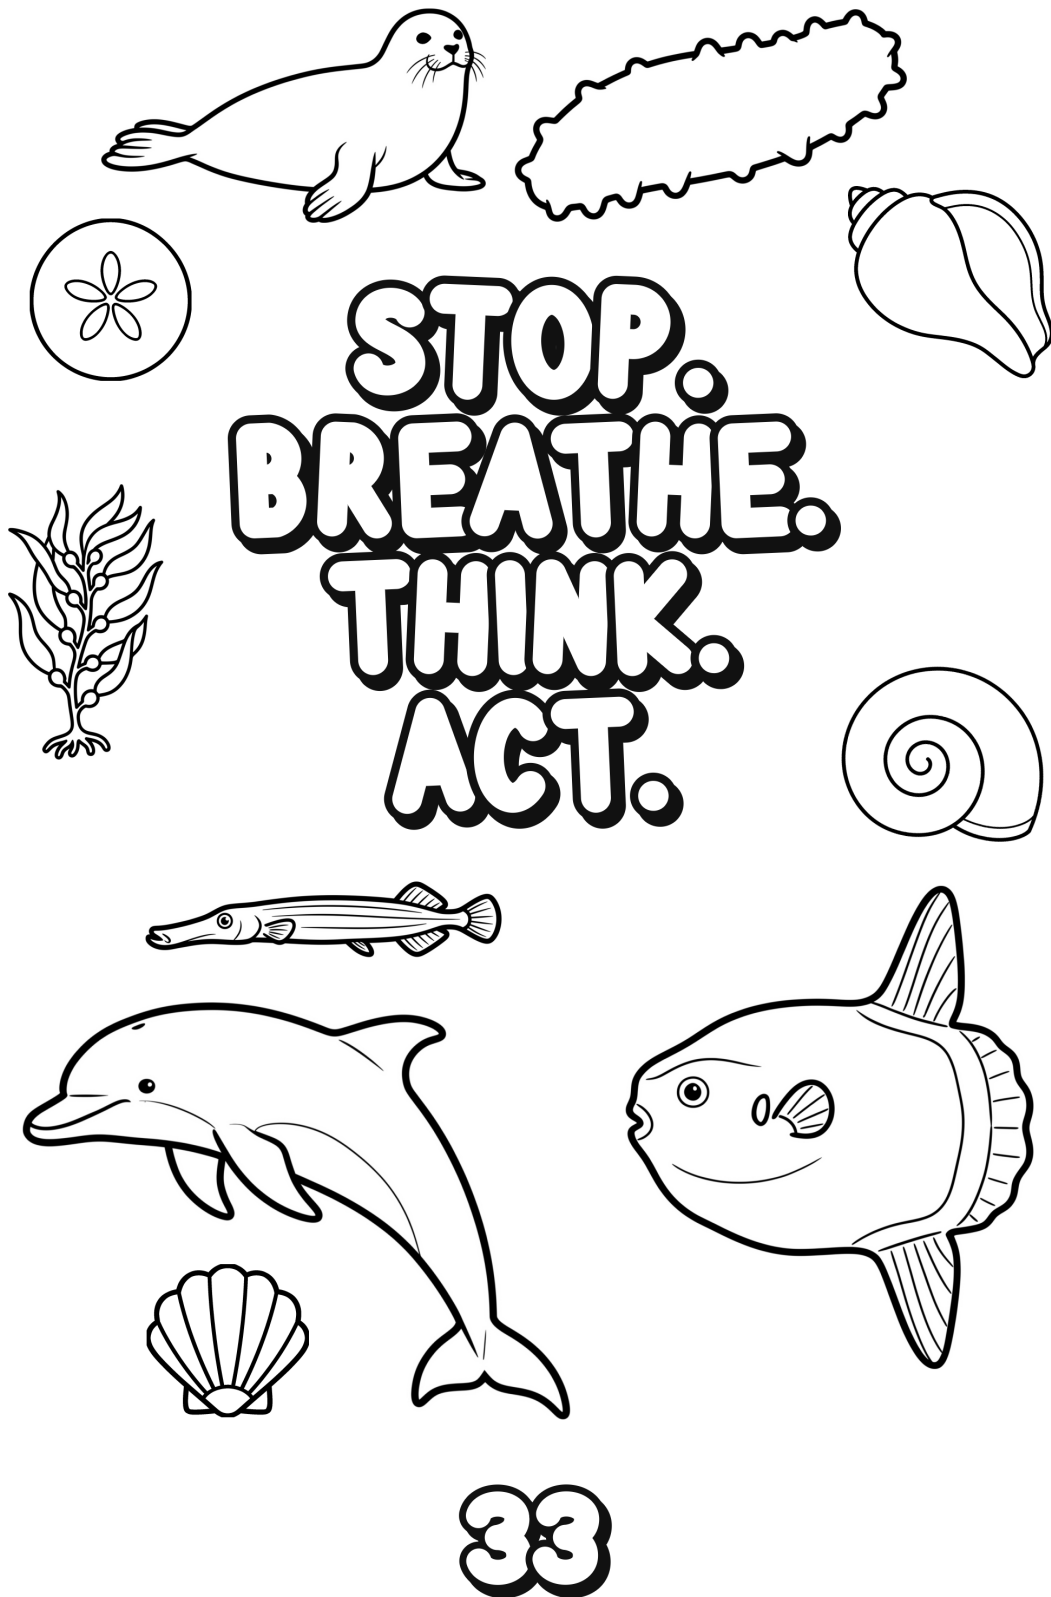

Coloring Adventures with Charlotte and Henry: The Mariana Trench Ocean Coloring Book holds 57 pages to color, drawn from the story of the first book. These three are a sample of it. The full book is a paid book, and it is at BraveHeartsPublishing.com. The three pages here are free, and they stay free.

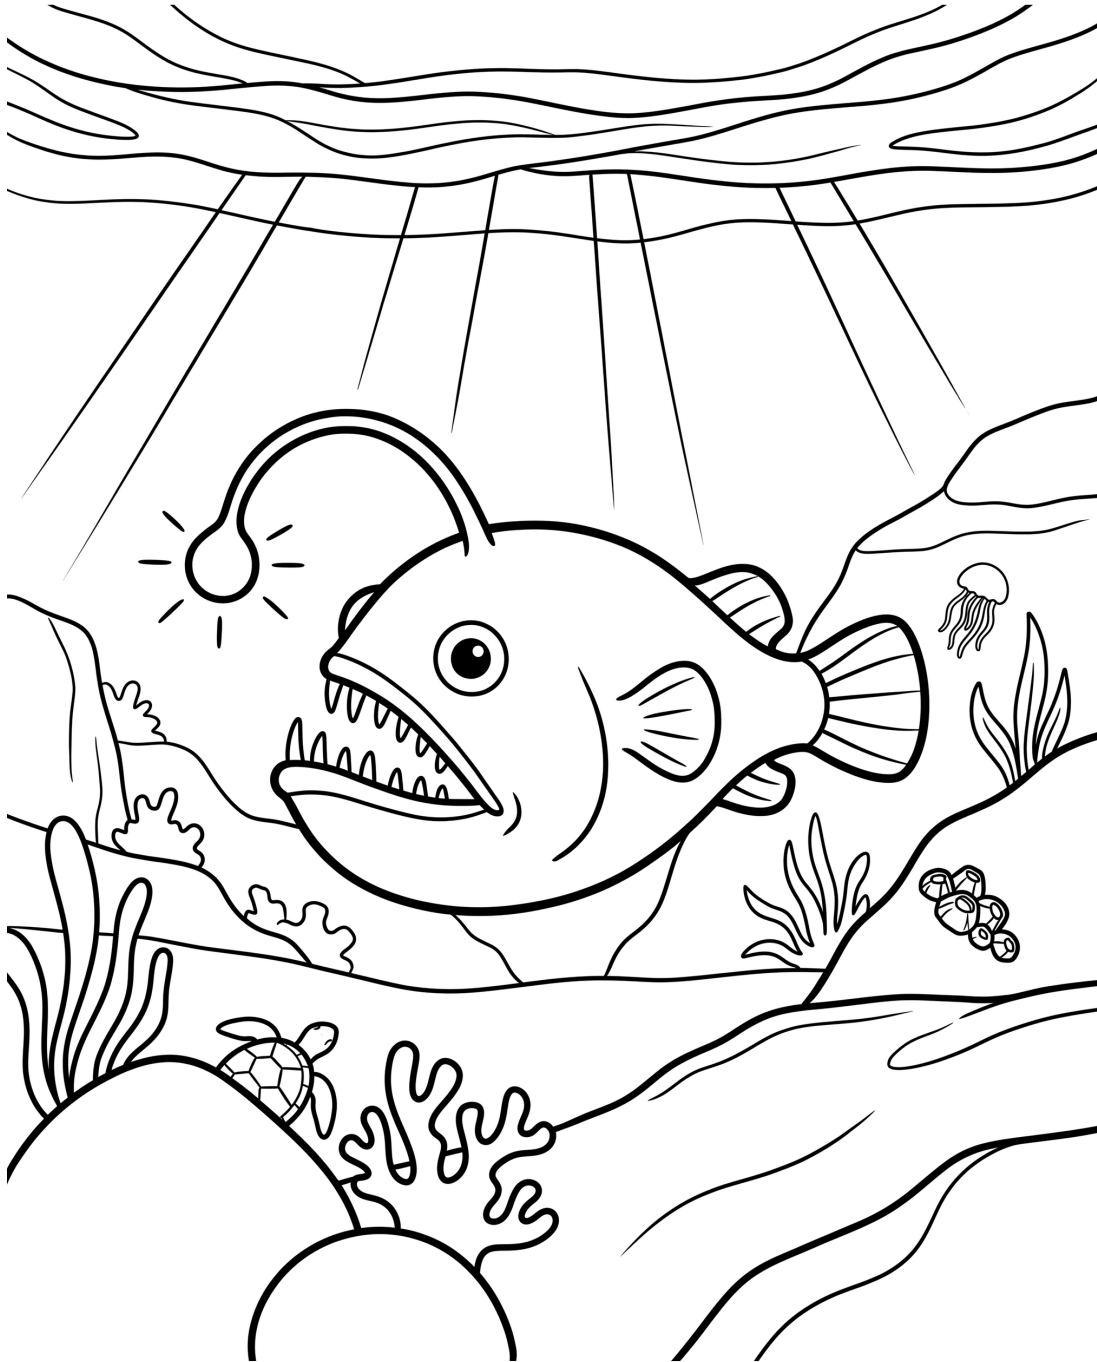

"Thank you, thank you!" the turtle cries happily.
